

EVERYONE WINS WITH ALLEVANT

We know that when patients overcome a life-threatening illness or accident, they often need costly rehabilitative services. In our member's rural areas, the problem is compounded. Rural residents are chronically underserved. For many of our rural healthcare members, already stretched resources simply limit what is realistically available.

There is a better way and WHA's partner, Allevant Solutions, LLC can help. As joint venture between Mayo Clinic & Select Medical, Allevant champions a new, smarter approach for rural hospitals to develop Transitional Care programs utilizing available swing beds. Critical Access Hospitals (CAHs) can't just keep more local patients, but can become a new kind of discharge destination.

Focused on helping patients transition to their highest level of independence, Transitional Care is a program that involves the patient and family, makes available the full resources of the CAH and focuses on measured outcomes and evidence-based processes to ensure patients get the best care possible. Increase your post-acute care offerings. Reduce costs. Become a new kind of treatment destination.
